BIO

Aaron Kabengele is a Bethany Lutheran College Senior student who originates from the Democratic Republic of Congo. He is pursuing mechanical engineering as a major and he is minoring in Maths and Media Arts. He has been involved in various on campus activities like track and field, helps the BLC women's soccer team as a team manager, where he helps produce and create media content for the team on social media. One of his major activity is helping International students integrate well in their new environment by getting them around town for their activities and needs. He currently lives in Mankato with his cousins as he continues to pursue his dream of bringing both world of media arts and engineering together, while promoting the gospel of Jesus-Christ.

PASSION

"The harvest truly is plentiful, but the laborers are few," proclaims the Lord in Matthew 9:37. As followers of Christ, we often struggle to find meaningful ways to serve God amid the world's chaos. Where do we start? Which aspect of the harvest should we concentrate on? And what tools should we employ? Through introspection, I discovered my passion for the world of media, granting me the privilege of joining the Christ in Media Institute.

BEGINNINGS

From an early age, my desire was to honor the Lord through serving Him. Limited in my understanding, I initially believed the pulpit was the only platform through which I could fulfil this. However, I came to realize that the Kingdom of God is vast and being a Pastor is just one facet of serving Him. In the Kingdom, everyone plays a distinct role, united for the King's glory. 1 Peter 4:10 reminds us of the diverse gifts and talents bestowed upon us by God, to be employed for his divine purpose. Discovering these gifts demands self-reflection. As Psalm 37:4 states, delighting in the Lord aligns our hearts with His purpose. When rooted in God's love, our interests can glorify Him and advance His Kingdom.

OPPORTUNITY

WELL<sup>OF</sup>TRUTHS

On the quest to discover my passions and how to integrate them to serve God. I uncovered a profound fascination with visual arts, graphic design, filmmaking, and motion graphics. Despite majoring in mechanical engineering, I chose to minor in Media Arts at Bethany Lutheran College and that's quite a combination. During a motion graphics course, the final project was to create a 1-minute motion infographic. I seized the chance to showcase the "Wells of Truths" podcast. This podcast idea was born from discussions with friends and family, addressing societal issues through a biblical lens. The final project coincided with the birth of "Wells of Truths," offering an opportunity for me to merge both worlds. Following its success; at the end of the class, my passion to serve God through the realm of media intensified. To listen to podcast episodes, visit "Wells of Truths" on Spotify. Witnessing my commitment to glorify God through media, my professor Amanda Quist nominated me to become a Christ in Media Fellow—an opportunity I humbly embraced. With this platform, I aim to broaden my horizons, enabling more content creation centered on exalting God. This led to the inception of "Kinetic Dream Studios"—a vision to produce content glorifying God and spreading the gospel through various media forms. The name blends elements of mechanical engineering and media arts, symbolizing the realization of my dream. While financing equipment and human resources pose challenges, I pray for God's favor and provision. For more content, visit Kinetic Dream Studios on YouTube and Instagram.

GRATITUDE

I extend my gratitude to the Christ in Media Institute for the nomination and platform. This conference serves as a gateway to a global audience, enabling the sharing of God-enabled work. Together, let's embrace our unique gifts, magnify the Lord's name through our talents, and impact the world for His glory.
